TEXT TYPE · B2 · POST OR COMMENT

The blog

Personal voice, invite interaction

Word count	Register	Title	Key feature
~250 or ~400 words	Informal to semi-formal	Post only (not a comment)	Personal, invite comments

STRUCTURE AND LAYOUT

Username
Date / time
Title – post only – attention-grabbing
Introduction – ~50 words – hook the reader, introduce topic
Body paragraphs 1–3 – ~50–80 words each – one content point per paragraph
Conclusion – ~50 words – wrap up + invite readers to comment

DO'S AND DON'TS

DO

- Write in a personal, engaging voice
- Share personal experiences and opinions freely
- Address the reader directly ("you")
- Encourage readers to comment (blog post)
- Reference the original post in your opening (blog comment)
- Contractions are OK (don't, I'm, it's)
- Be original and show personality
- Shorter paragraphs work well here

DON'T

- Don't write like a report (too formal)
- Don't forget to invite comments (blog post)
- Don't forget to reference the original post (blog comment)
- Don't be rude or offensive – remember it's public
- Don't use academic phrases like "It is widely believed that..."

WEAKER VS. STRONGER

WEAKER

One should carefully consider the various advantages before deciding to take a gap year.

STRONGER

I used to think a gap year was just an expensive way to put off real life. Then I took one, and it changed my mind.

Why it matters. A blog needs a personal, informal voice, with contractions and a short story. A formal phrase like "one should consider" belongs in a different text type.

KEY TIP

For a blog comment, your very first sentence should refer to the original post, ideally by name: "Hi Jeff, I stumbled across your blog on overtourism and it really made me think..."

MODEL TEXT

Why I Quit Instagram for a Month (And What Happened Next) (~250 words · Informal register)

> The task. Write a post for your personal blog about a time you took a break from social media.
>
> In your post you should:
>
> - explain why you decided to quit
> - describe how the first weeks went
> - say how you use social media now
>
> Write around 250 words. The model follows the five-paragraph plan: introduction, one paragraph for each content point, conclusion.

Structure Text-specific Language

by max_adventures · 22 March 2026, 19:34[1]

Why I Quit Instagram for a Month (And What Happened Next)

OK so hear me out –[2] I know everyone talks about digital detoxes these days, but I actually went through with it. Last month I deleted Instagram from my phone. Cold turkey. And honestly? It was weird.[3]

So why did I do it?[4] I realised I'd been scrolling for about two hours every single day. That's basically[5] the same as watching a movie. Every. Day.[6] No "screen time limits", no "I'll just check once a day" – I wanted it gone. My friends genuinely thought I had lost my mind. One of them actually asked if I was okay.

The first few days were rough.[7] I kept unlocking my phone and staring at the empty space where the app used to be. But after about a week, something clicked. I started reading before bed again. By the end of the second week, I had finished an entire book, the first one in months, and somehow my brain felt quieter and less twitchy[8].

So, am I back on Instagram now?[9] Yeah, I am. But I use it differently: maybe 20 minutes a day, max. The month off taught me it's just a tool, and I'd been treating it like a lifestyle.

If you have ever felt like your phone owns you instead of the other way round, maybe give it a try. Worst case, you waste a weekend. Best case, you get a little piece of your life back. Have any of you tried something like this? I'd love to hear your stories in the comments![10]

WHAT THE EXAMINER NOTICES IN THIS MODEL

The numbers match the marked passages in the model text.

1. Username + date/time – required for blog: "by max_adventures · 22 March 2026, 19:34"
2. Informal, personal tone – contractions OK: "OK so hear me out –"
3. Short sentence for effect – works in blogs: "And honestly? It was weird."
4. Content point 1 – why you quit: "So why did I do it?"
5. Informal register – fine for blogs: "basically"
6. Stylistic fragmentation – very blog-appropriate: "Every. Day."
7. Content point 2 – how it went: "The first few days were rough."
8. Vivid personal detail: "my brain felt quieter and less twitchy"
9. Content point 3 – how you use it now: "So, am I back on Instagram now?"
10. Call to comment – required in blog posts: "Have any of you tried something like this? I'd love to hear your stories in the comments!"

USEFUL PHRASES

Blog post openers

- It took me ages to figure this out, but…
- So, here's what I've been thinking about…
- You won't believe what happened to me…
- OK so hear me out –

Blog comment openers

- Hi [name], I've just seen your blog on…
- I stumbled across your post and…
- This really resonated with me because…

Engaging the reader

- What do you think?
- I'd love to hear your thoughts on this.
- Let me know in the comments!
- Has anyone else experienced this?
- Am I the only one who…?

More online. On the website this text type also has a second model text (“What three months without takeaway taught me”, ~250 words · informal) and a realistic borderline text with notes on where it loses marks: matura.bernhardgmeiner.com/blog/